Mount Holyoke College. Her book is called The Mental Traits of Sex: An Experimental Investigation of the Normal Mind in Men and Women. It contains the results of tests, carefully devised and executed, of twenty-five men and as many women, taken somewhat at random from the upper classes and graduate department of the University of Chicago within the last two years, the selection being made among this class in the community because men and women in coeducational institutions of America, beginning with the public schools and ending in the universities, present fewer points of difference in their training than are likely to be found elsewhere. It is one of the important conclusions of the work that by far the most apparent differences between men and women come from training and education, and not from any inherent or intrinsic differences from sex; so this point was necessarily insisted upon in the selection of the subject-matter for experiment.

"The ground covered in the tests includes questions of motor ability, skin and muscle senses, taste and smell, hearing, vision, intellectual faculties, and affective processes. A chapter is given to each of these varying inquiries, and each chapter contains as well a review of all the work done on similar lines in the world of science in recent years. The final chapter brings together all the facts elicited by the experiments and compares them with other similar facts, so that less than an hour's reading will put the curious in full possession of all that the world really knows experimentally, as distinguished from empirically, concerning men as men and women as women."—Chicago Daily News.
